

Don't miss this
lively, lovely,
informal, international Bazaar.

40 nations, 40 cultures.
Their arts, their crafts,
their foods.

People-to-People puts you face-to-face with citizens from everywhere.

This is probably the gayest (and certainly the friendliest) spot at the World's Fair. Inside those tents, under those awnings, all around the grounds, you'll find beautiful, handmade, authentic native art. It's for sale (or just for seeing). And everybody is nice to you.

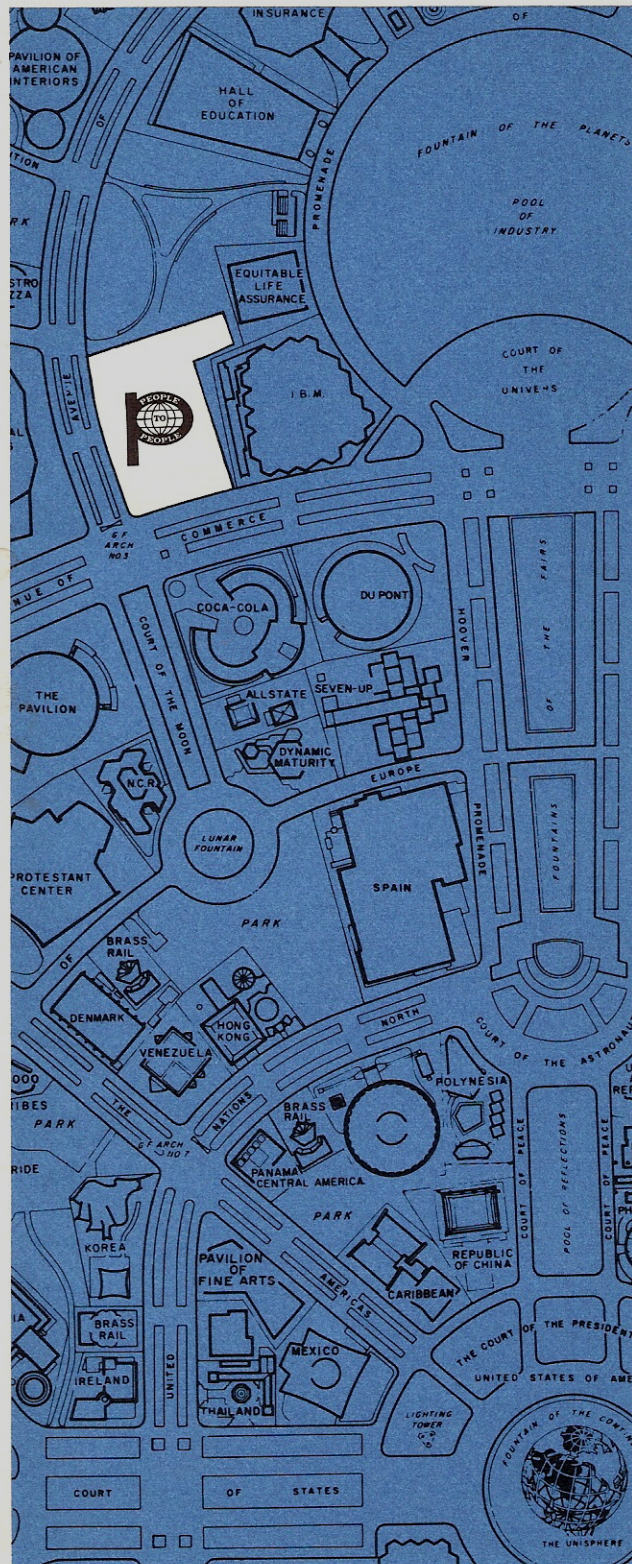

There's free entertainment. (Folk dancers and native singers.) And you're sure to see somebody you know: your fellow citizens.

Right smack in the middle is the superb Food Bazaar, sort of a round-the-world snack bar. Snacks of all nations: from the simple Belgium Waffle to the exotic American Hot Dog. (Every tasty morsel at the Food Bazaar is authentic, too. It's run by Restaurant Associates.)

A WORD ABOUT PEOPLE-TO-PEOPLE

People-to-People is a non-governmental organization. It has to be. Because it does what governments can't do. It demonstrates what you've always known: most people are good eggs. When you get to know them, you get to like them.

People-to-People makes you a personal diplomat. You show other people what America and its citizens are like. You offer a friendly hand to visiting foreigners. And you help other Americans to understand the cultures and traditions of other lands.
